

Public Library on Conservation Communication with ConserveOnline

Visit over 20 publicly available conservation-related discussion groups on ConserveOnline! Through public discussion groups and information sharing, ConserveOnline is an open forum for sharing successes and failures, and for connecting scientific research with field-based conservation practice. Please share this information with your staff, partners and colleagues.

Available Discussion Groups: Bird Conservation, Climate Change, Developing Conservation Strategies, Ecoregional Planning, Fire Management, Freshwater, Freshwater Invertebrates, Geographic Information Systems, Grassland Management, Humor, Invasive Species, Marine Ecoregional Planning, Native Plant Nursery, Private Forestland Management, Targets, Travel, Updating the 10 yr Goal, Wetland Management

ConserveOnline is a "one-stop" online, public library, created and maintained by The Nature Conservancy in partnership with other conservation organizations. The library makes conservation tools, techniques, and experience available to a broad community of conservation practitioners. This site is intended to foster learning and collaboration, and provide information and support to anyone making conservation-related decisions, from the staff of conservation organizations to land managers at government agencies to local land trusts to private landowners. We welcome anyone with documents, data, maps, or images relevant to the science and practice of conservation to make these resources publicly available through ConserveOnline, and to share their expertise through the discussion groups.

To Access Discussion Groups

- 1) Browse to www.ConserveOnline.org, click on discussion groups under communities.
- 2) If not registered on the discussion groups, register as a new user. (Note- Login registration for the discussion groups is different from www.ConserveOnline.org.)
- 3) Login within 24 hrs after you receive your temporary password through your email.
- 4) Once you have logged in, Click on the desired discussion group on the left side of the screen. Follow instructions to post a new message or to read new and/or old messages.

To Subscribe to a Mailing List (i.e. postings are sent to and from your email box)

- 1) After you receive your password, login to <http://groups.ConserveOnline.org>
- 2) Click on "Subscribe to Mailing Lists", choose the desired mailing lists, and click Save.

Web Accessibility Features

The web accessibility feature allows you to:

View new messages.

Search on old messages.

View other publicly available discussion groups on 19 other conservation related topics.

If you subscribe to a mailing list, you can view or send messages through email or the discussion group website. The message will automatically be posted to the discussion board and listserv. Likewise, if you post your message on the discussion board, it will automatically be e-mailed to mail-list subscribers.